Physician Says President Is as Well as Year Ago

"No man could have improved more under the load than he has carried. He has done well to hold his place.

"No man can come into his office with his long hours and responsibilities and change of normal habits, including official duties and official and exacting social obligations, and have stood it any better than has Warren G. Harding.

"But," his physician went on, "a bank which permits its resources to continually dwindle away soon faces failure. This also is true of human beings, and the president is no exception."

"He should do it now," he declared. "Facts is he forgets himself entirely and devotes himself to the duties of his office. He is unfair to himself."

Gen. Sawyer has determined that from now on his patient must do "nothing" to maintain himself to a high degree of physical fitness.

He has advised the president that although the public was not informed, there were days during the winter—one of the most severe in Washington history—when the president had a number of slight attacks which might have brought on acute illness.

There was a great deal of gripe and a mild form of influenza in Washington this winter, "and the president was subjected to the same opportunities of getting sick as any other man."

But he escaped serious illness and Gen. Sawyer naturally feels happy because, as he says, his job is not to cure the president "but to keep him well."

The president averages 23 conferences a day with persons worth while. Some of these conferences last from one to two hours, although the average is about 15 minutes.

There is hardly a night but that Mr. Harding does not carry with him from the executives offices to his private study in the White House a number of papers and reports which he must read.

The night before he submitted the arms conference treaties to the Senate, Mr. Harding remained awake until 3 o'clock writing his messages.

Even about the presidential yacht Mayflower on trips down the Potomac, he took papers to study and recommendations to read.

During the year he went to New York twice, to New England once, to Boston once, to Atlanta once, and once to Yorktown, Va., and Valley Forge, Pa. But everywhere he went there were speeches to deliver, reception committees to meet.

"Following his Plymouth speech at Boston he went up to Seelye Woods, his summer home in New Hampshire for what he thought would be a few days' rest. It turned out to be a festive occasion for the New Englanders with the president making two speeches in one day and traveling 136 miles in an automobile from town to town to make them.

"He has always been my belief, borne out by 15 years as an exhibitor, that popular prices have made motion pictures the great industry they are today," said Mr. Rhodes. "A house such as the Blackstone should be filled every afternoon and night. There are plenty of people in this community who want to see good pictures, but when the price barrier is too high, they just naturally turn to other amusements. I believe that with the price of admission lowered to 25 cents, and with the best pictures obtainable shown at all times, the Blackstone should in reality become the pride of all South Bend instead of a meeting place for a few people who can afford higher prices."

WARNS MINERS AGAINST STATE WAGE PROGRAM

It is obviously intended to destroy the effectiveness and strength of the national policy which has been formulated and contemplates the breaking up of our forces into separate units. Their policy is inherently selfish, economically unound and contains no elements of consideration for public welfare. I therefore advise that the representatives of district 12 (Illinois) decline the offer of the Illinois coal operators."

The message to Mr. Farrington was sent by Mr. Lewis after the adjournment of the latter's conference with the district union officials, representing the southwestern coal producing states was discussed.

No announcement of any decision affecting the southwest was made, except a statement that the union officials would confer informally with representatives of the southwestern interstate coal operators' association on March 9, probably at Kansas City. The policy, however, as laid down by the message to the Illinois miners was regarded later as indicating that no agreement could be expected for the southwestern field.

ALCOHOL PERMITS OF FLEISCHMANN COMPANY REVOKED

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Orders revoking the industrial alcohol permits of the Fleischmann Yeast company, Inc. of New York, and its ten branch agencies, were issued Friday night by Prohibition Commissioner Hayes.

At the same time prohibition officials in the cities where agencies of the company are located were ordered to seize supplies of industrial alcohol in plants. Besides New York, the company has branches at Peekskill, N. Y., Yonkers, N. Y., Brooklyn, N. Y., Scranton, Pa., Philadelphia, Jersey City, Cincinnati, Bridgeport, Conn., Cambridge, Mass., and Langdon, D. C.

Whether the revocation of the industrial alcohol permits of the Fleischmann company would interfere with the manufacture of yeast, prohibition officials Friday night were unable to say. It was thought, however, that alcohol manufactured along with yeast could be allowed to evaporate instead of being conserved as heretofore.

Revocation of the company's permit is regarded by Commissioner Hayes as one of the biggest things done by the prohibition bureau.

The action was taken on the recommendation of S. E. Rutter, chief federal prohibition director for Pennsylvania, before whom hearings were held in Philadelphia upon charges of misuse of their industrial alcohol permits by the Fleischmann agencies.

Grounds for the revocation of the permits were given by Mr. Hayes as follows: "Diversion of non-beverage alcohol for beverage purposes; disposed of non-beverage alcohol on forged permits and without permits to purchase; kept and maintained false records at times no records whatever of receipts and disposition of non-beverage alcohol; failed to file transcript of records with the collector of internal revenue and otherwise acted in utmost bad faith with respect to conforming with the prohibition act and the regulations in carrying on business under its several permits."

Blackstone Cuts Price to Afford All Opportunity

Paramount Pictures to be Shown Beginning Sunday at 25 Cents Admission.

In the belief that popular prices tend to create greater interest in good motion pictures, Ezra Rhodes, who has just leased the Blackstone theater, announces that beginning Sunday, March 5, the price of admission at this house will be reduced from 40 cents to 25 cents.

With the large seating capacity of the Blackstone, and with its ideal arrangement for showing pictures, Mr. Rhodes declares that because of the greatly increased patronage that is sure to follow this drastic cut in the price of admission, it will be possible to make the Blackstone in reality the center of amusement for South Bend.

"It has always been my belief, borne out by 15 years as an exhibitor, that popular prices have made motion pictures the great industry they are today," said Mr. Rhodes. "A house such as the Blackstone should be filled every afternoon and night. There are plenty of people in this community who want to see good pictures, but when the price barrier is too high, they just naturally turn to other amusements. I believe that with the price of admission lowered to 25 cents, and with the best pictures obtainable shown at all times, the Blackstone should in reality become the pride of all South Bend instead of a meeting place for a few people who can afford higher prices."

The first week's bookings under the new management show William S. Hart in "The Whistle"; a Paramount super production "The Woman God Chanced"; and one of the most talked of pictures of the year, "Three Live Ghosts." The coming weeks will carry pictures of a similarly high standard. Some changes have already been made on the screen and projection and experts declare the pictures at the Blackstone are now much clearer and sharper than in the past.

Large Audience Grets Industrial Club Stunts

A large audience greeted the appearance of the clubs of the industrial federation in their stunts Thursday evening at the Y. W. C. A. "The Deserter School" was especially well received, as was the opera, "Love's Tragedy." The fashion show featured the vamp from Springfield, the maid from Tokio, and "Trixie" from the Orpheum.

Erlie Compton read the story of some one who felt as it was enacted. The Hinerist and Gail Ralston gave vocal and violin selections, and Pauline Judy sang, accompanied by the glee club.

The dime collected as "general admission" were turned over to the federation budget.

REACH COMPROMISE AGREEMENT ON LAW REGULATING BONUS

Committee said it was not possible to estimate how much money the government would have to advance on and after September 30, 1932, as that would depend first upon the number of men electing to take certificates, and second, upon the number borrowing from the banks and defaulting in payment of borrowing directly from the government.

"It is hoped and believed," said Chairman Fordney in a formal statement, "that when these insurance certificates become due and payable the money may be secured by the sale of property and securities withdrawn by the federal government and without any special charge on the treasury. This plan seems to meet with the general approval of the members of the house of representatives as well as the public generally."

Some members of the committee estimated that if all of the men took certificates and held them for the full twenty year period, the ultimate cost of the bonus would be approximately four billion dollars. They thought, however, that this sum would be reduced by perhaps a billion dollars or more through borrowing or heretofore.

A few details of the revised plan still remain to be worked out by the majority committee, it was said today, but the expectation is that the new bill will be ready for consideration by the end of the week and means for its speedy passage will be made. Democrats on the committee would have then their first opportunity to study and pass on the new plan.

Just as Mrs. Tudor, supported by Kenneth Clayton, confronted the coroner and his companion.

"What is it?" she asked in a trembling voice. "What have you come to tell me?"

"That Miss Laurel Tudor came to her death by means of carbon monoxide poisoning. Asphyxiation is plainly indicated. Mrs. Tudor, it is murder."

CHAPTER VII. As the dread word fell from the coroner's lips in grave accents Mrs. Tudor uttered a low moaning cry.

"Lieutenant Cadmus was the first to speak. 'What can it mean?' he demanded hoarsely. The professor shrugged his shoulders.

"I am not a criminologist," he observed. Then, with a continental bow, he turned toward Sergeant Barry. "I have, however, had the honor of assisting our young friend here on more than one noted case in New York, and I have no doubt that he will be successful in overcoming the difficulties connected with this affair. This part of it which seems most inexplicable to me is that the other young lady who shared the room with the victim was not killed also; that she suffered not even the slightest ill effect."

"If it is possible, professor, the carbon monoxide might not have been injected into the atmosphere of the room itself but administered to Miss Tudor directly by means of some such thing as an ether cone pressed down tightly over her face?"

It was Barry who spoke. The other nodded.

"Quite possible; in fact, the only way, if the windows had been left open all night, as they were found in the morning. There was, I understand, no trace of gas discernible in the air when the maid discovered the body."

"Not a bit," the sheriff intervened. "But suppose somebody went in and closed all those windows in the night and stuffed rags around so as to make the room airtight, and then opened the windows wide again as soon as they'd gone their work? It was blowing a gale all night long; would there be any odor of gas after the room had been aired for several hours?"

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They do not injure the teeth like strong brands of calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dizziness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a torpid liver. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "loggy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. See and be convinced.

"No," Professor Semynow admitted. "But you forget, my dear sir, that the other young lady slept undisturbed and unharmed through it all."

"There was a sty significance in the sheriff's ejaculation which made Barry glance sharply at him before he turned once more to the professor.

"Just what is carbon monoxide?" he asked. "How is it made or generated, and how obtainable by any one who is not a chemist?"

"Carbon monoxide, roughly speaking, is a gas composed of carbon and oxygen." Professor Semynow explained. "You may observe it occasionally burning with a pale blue flame in fireplaces or stoves."

"Carbon monoxide is also known as carbonic oxide," the coroner put in, jealous of the professor's display of knowledge.

"Precisely, my friend," the latter responded dryly. "It generates itself in stoves or furnaces, as in illuminating gas. Every automobile generates it in greater or less quantity, according to the amount of care it receives."

"Every automobile?" Barry repeated swiftly.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub On Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once. Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which restores circulation promptly and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the mucus old mustard plaster, it does the work with out the mustard plaster's stinging and blister.

During the "Flu" epidemic a few years ago Musterole was used in our training camps. The Y. M. C. A. War Board sent thousands of jars to France for our soldiers overseas. Doctors have been recommending it to their patients for years for colds, aches and pains.

Just rub it on with your finger tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief. Your druggist has Musterole; 25c and 50c, in jars and tubes; hospital size $3.00.

ISABEL OSTRANDER

BEGIN HERE TODAY FAY TUDOR, wealthy orphan, suffers a nervous breakdown in France after learning of the death of her brother.

She returns to the Tudor estate in Sandy Cove and is met by her aunt, an attractive widow. The MRS. CLARA TUDOR, and the latter's daughter.

Laura, the summer colony is frightened by the reported presence of a "wild man" whom Fay believes she has seen peering in the windows of the Tudor house. SHERIFF HULSE and his friend, SERGEANT WILBUR BARRY, a New York detective, investigate. Fay is attracted by the personality of CAPTAIN WARREN, her brother's friend, who was with Wilbur when he fell.

On the night of Mrs. Tudor's death, a sort had existed between herself and her cousin, Fay Tudor, but it was all off two years ago, before she went to France."

The words had come haltingly, as though he were aware of their sudden significance. Barry seized his opportunity.

"Then why did you consider it necessary to wait? If you were quite sure that the affair was over what possible objection could you expect from Miss Fay to your engagement to her cousin?"

"Well, you see, our engagement was not a formal one. She took herself off to France and then her cousin and I found that we cared for each other, but Miss Laurel wouldn't give me her promise until Fay had returned and we knew how she felt about it."

"Did you know that Miss Laurel intended to confide in her cousin last night?" Barry asked caustically. "Miss Fay told me not an hour ago
